New Predator Types

Choosing a Predator Type is one of the most important aspects of character creation in V5. It sets the tone of your vampire's nightly existence and relationship with their Beast, it grants you Disciplines to which you might not otherwise have access, and it offers new characters and other seeds for your Storyteller to nourish into plot.

The V5 Core Rulebook offered ten Predator Types to begin with, and several more have been released since. Here, we describe 24 completely new Predator Types for you to choose from during character creation. Each new Predator Type offers a unique combination of Disciplines and a flavorful array of skill specialties and Advantages. They are particularly helpful to the Storyteller, for whom reusing the same dozen Predator Types in non-player characters can get a little repetitive.

As with all Predator Types, choosing one of the styles given here does not force you to feed only in that manner. Unless the Predator Type imposes a Flaw that restricts feeding, you are free to feed in other ways without consequence, allowing you to adapt to the resources available on any given night.

Ambulance Chaser

Humans shed blood all the time - in car accidents, drive-by shootings, domestic stabbings, and any of a myriad of weirder and rarer circumstances. You wait for these moments of bloody serendipity, pouncing on the victims to lick up the blood that flows from their wounds before the other first responders can arrive. Perhaps you even turn into an animal - a stray dog, a crow, or maybe even a vulture - to make the feeding less remarkable. Maybe it's a little cold-blooded of you to take advantage of people already in a bad state, but hey, you weren't the one to hurt them. Maybe you even administer first aid once you've drunk your fill! In life, you might have been an adrenaline junky, a first-responder, or a true crime enthusiast.

- Add a specialty: Drive (Emergency Vehicles) or Medicine (First Aid)
- Gain one dot of Potence or Protean
- Spend three dots between Influence, Contacts, and Allies (•••)
- Gain the Obvious Predator Flaw (••)
- Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Medicine or Wits + Larceny. Once you've found a site with wounded mortals, either disguise your collection of blood samples as medically necessary or lap up the blood when no one's looking.

Blood Baby

You don't have to bother with finding ways to slake your hunger - an older and more powerful vampire takes care of that for you. Your Mawla lets you feed from their Herd, caters mortals for your nightly sustenance, or allows you to access their stockpile of bagged blood. Add your Mawla to the relationship map. The Storyteller will make sure your Mawla has Merits that allow them to provide you with blood regularly. You might have been a child when you were Embraced, or you might have been a trust fund baby, an orphan, or an artist.

- Add a specialty: Persuasion (Begging) or Technology (Catfishing)
- Gain one dot of Presence or Dominate
- Gain the Mawla Merit (••)
- Gain the Disliked Flaw (•) Some Kindred look down on you for being unable or unwilling to hunt for yourself.
- Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Persuasion or Charisma + Technology. Call up your Mawla and wheedle them into sending you a snack or - when you can't do that - catfish some bozo off the internet for a quick meetup. Sure, he might be a predator - but so are you.

Codependent

Hunting? You don't know her. You feed from a single mortal exclusively: your partner, parent, best friend, or trusted servant. This mortal - your blood doll - likely accompanies you everywhere, in case the Hunger should take you. They live in constant danger of your loss of control over the Beast, but you treat them well - you must, or they'll decline within a week from pernicious anemia, and you will be left with no way to sate your Hunger. Most Kindred with this predator type are overprotective and attentive to their blood doll's needs, plying them with orange juice, cookies, and iron supplements after each feeding, and protecting them from danger with their own undead flesh. Your Humanity might suffer if your blood doll dies, but you can replace them given time to form a bond with someone new. You could have come from any background, but you probably had an unusually strong bond - possibly to an unhealthy degree - with the mortal that now supports you as your blood doll.

• Add a specialty: Etiquette (Blood Dolls) or Medicine (Anemia)

• Gain one dot of Dominate or Fortitude

• Gain a three-dot Retainer (•••) (your blood doll)

• Gain the Feeding Flaw: Dependent (••)

• Hunting Pools: Charisma + Etiquette or Intelligence + Medicine. There's little chance of being unable to feed on your dedicated blood doll, but you need to keep them healthy and happy by treating them respectfully and tending to them medically after feeding.

Condiment King

You don't just drink blood - you eat it. You prefer to take your meals by mixing blood with mortal food. Maybe you just dip your French fries in a side of A-positive, or maybe you prepare fine meals laced throughout with raw blood chosen meticulously for its resonance and antigenicity. Either way, you use only the freshest of ingredients; the blood you consume must still be fresh when it is applied to your solid meals (unless you gained the Iron Gullet Merit separately). In life, you might have been a chef, a foodie, a college student, or a stay-at-home parent.

• Add a specialty: Craft (Cooking) or Etiquette (Table Manners)

• Gain one dot of Auspex or Protean

• Gain the Mythic Merit: Eat Food (••)

• Gain the Mythic Flaw: Folkloric Block (Garlic) (•)

• Hunting Pools: Wits + Craft or Manipulation + Etiquette. Gain access to fresh blood (usually animal blood) under the cover of preparing a fine meal or beguile a mortal at a high society dinner with your excellent table manners - and use their blood as a condiment for the leftovers.

Contractor

Like the silver-tongued devil himself, you specialize in beguiling or ensnaring victims into contractual agreements for their blood. You seek out the vulnerable to make your offers: promising the disabled an easy way to make a living, the terminally ill a way to extend their life, the depressed a convenient means of simplifying their responsibilities. Perhaps you even trick yourself into believing that your freely-entered contracts make your feeding moral, consensual - you and your vessels just try not to think about the impossibility of your prosecution if you ever did violate the terms of the agreement. In life, you might have been an attorney, a salesperson, a drug lord, or a corporate hiring manager.

• Add a specialty: Academics (Law) or Streetwise (Bribes)

• Gain one dot of Auspex or Presence

• Gain three dots of Herd (•••) (they are Blood Bonded to you if you choose to make that a term of their contracts)

• Gain the Adversary Flaw (••) (a Kindred that sees your feeding activities as exploitation or Masquerade breach)

• Hunting Pools: Intelligence + Academics or Resolve + Streetwise. Weave dizzying legal jargon around your prey until they sign their blood away to you or make a binding handshake deal with someone off the street too scared by your eating habits and enamored of your money to squeal.

Delivery Diner

Modern nights bring modern solutions to the ancient demands of the Beast. You prefer to feed under the cover of delivery - you order takeout and take a few pints out of the driver as an extra on the ticket, or you are the driver, feeding on poor mortals ordering sad Chinese for one. You might have been a delivery driver in life, a hustler, or nearly any other kind of person.

• Add a specialty: Technology (Apps) or Drive (Trucks)

• Gain one dot of Dominate or Obfuscate

• Gain a dot of Haven or Resources (•)

• Hunting Pools: Intelligence + Technology or Wits + Drive. Use an "app," as the youth call them, to order a delivery driver sent straight to your home or park your work vehicle strategically to obscure view while you feed on the recipients of your deliveries.

Incarcerator

You kidnap and imprison your victims in your

Haven, to feed on over the course of months or even years. If you're smart, you are careful to fake their deaths, allaying suspicions and diverting law enforcement. Many incarcerators prefer to imprison those who they feel deserve this fate: violent criminals, abusive parents, human traffickers, police officers, etc. In life, you might have suffered at the hands of the type of mortal you now target for kidnapping, or you could have been law enforcement or military.

- Add a specialty: Brawl (Kidnapping) or Larceny (Falsifying Crime Scenes)
- Gain one dot of Potence or Oblivion
- Gain a two-dot Haven (••)
- Gain one dot of the Haven: Cells Merit(•)
- Gain two dots of the Enemies Flaw (••) (escaped victims or law enforcement on the case)
- Hunting Pools: Dexterity + Brawl or Intelligence + Larceny. Snatch someone off the streets and spirit them into a cell in your haven or undertake meticulous falsification of an easy kidnappee's abduction site, faking a death that leaves no body.

Intermittent Faster

You're not too picky about where your blood comes from; you just try to drink as little as possible. You fast for long stretches between meals, trying to limit the burden you impose on the world's mortals. Some Kindred with this predator type seek enlightenment through pursuit of Golconda, while others may hold fast to their mortal faith and its moral restrictions.

- Add a specialty: Athletics (Endurance) or Occult (Golconda)
- Gain one dot of Animalism or Fortitude
- Gain the Intermittent Fasting feeding Flaw (••)
- Gain a dot of Humanity
- Hunting Pools: You sate your Hunger opportunistically or when the Beast can be controlled no longer. When you are forced to hunt, you do so in the easiest way that comes to mind; use any dice pool you can justify to your Storyteller.

Maskless

"Hide in plain sight," has always been your motto. You prefer to feed while being observed by an audience of hundreds, if not thousands, of rapt mortals, relying on incredulity to convince them that you surely cannot actually be drinking human blood. You star in vampire movies and feed in front of the camera, perform in a gothic stage show that features dramatic "blood drinking" that surely must be faked, or you run a channel for "sanguinarians" that want to believe you're actually drinking blood on stream - but as a kink, of course, not for basic sustenance. Perhaps you make it easier for your audience to rationalize by limiting your on-screen activities to animal blood. You believe in the Masquerade - really, you do! But you find it so much more convenient to just allow the mortals to convince themselves. The Camarilla, and many other Kindred besides, don't agree with you, but you have plenty of practice dealing with them. In life, you might have been an actor, a stage magician, a social media influencer, or a politician.

- Add a specialty: Performance (Drinking Blood) or Politics (Masquerade)
- Gain one dot of Animalism or Presence
- Spend three dots between Fame and Mask (•••)
- Spend two dots between the Infamy and Suspect/Shunned Flaws (••)
- Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Performance. Stage a show that involves miming or actually drinking blood.

Opportunist

You feed on those on the fringes of society: immigrants, the homeless, eccentrics, etc. Mastering languages helps you to blend in with diverse or immigrant communities as you hunt for the gullible, naïve, and lonely. You offer a friendly ear, an understanding presence, and you take just a bit of blood in exchange. You might have come from one of these communities when you were alive, or you might have been a social worker, a police officer, or an immigration official.

- Add a specialty: Streetwise (Cast-outs) or Investigation (Immigrants)
- Gain one dot of Presence of Obfuscate
- Gain the Linguistics Merit (••)
- Gain the No Haven Flaw (•)
- Hunting Pools: Charisma + Streetwise or Wits + Investigation. Ingratiate yourself with someone living on the street and lure them to a secluded location or track down an isolated immigrant living alone – no one to call the cops when a predator appears at their window.

Parasite

You feed on blood second- or third-hand, plucking ticks from bushes, lice from scalps, or mosquitoes directly from the air. Not the most practical or dignified of feeding styles, but there are rumors of powerful Parasites that master swarms of vampire bats or mosquitoes, casting them out into the night air to feed and return to their master with blood. Others simply feel that this disgusting indignity is what they deserve as monsters leeching off the blood of others. In life, you might have been an entomologist, a charity worker, or an abnormal psychologist.

- Add a specialty: Animal Ken (Swarms) or Awareness (Blood Suckers)
- Gain one dot of Animalism or Celerity
- Gain a one-dot Mawla (•) (a Kindred who shares your feeding style or supports you)
- Gain two dots of Retainers (••) (ghouled animals)
- Gain the Obvious Predator Flaw (••)
- Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Animal Ken or Dexterity + Awareness. If you have Feral Whispers, you can use that to dispatch a swarm of blood-sucking creatures into the night to feed and return to regurgitate the blood into your mouth. If not, spend hours collecting ticks or mosquitoes, each one a tiny pinprick of disgusting satiation.

Quiverfull

You prefer to feed on your own childer rather than on mortals. You have given the Embrace freely, siring a coven of childer like a brood of children. This family you have created serves as proxy for your own feeding; your childer drain blood from the wider world and make it available to you from their veins. Some 13th generation Nosferatu or Hecata have been known to Embrace a brood of thin-bloods, free of the curse of their sire's clan, using them to funnel blood into the sire's hideous or deadly maw. If the Embrace is regulated in your domain, you must either take the Infamy flaw for having created so many illegal childer, or you must have an explanation for why your large brood is permitted. In life, you might have followed a conservative faith or been a cult leader, a vampire fanatic, or someone with a large found family.

- Add a specialty: Leadership (Childer) or Academics (a religion of your choice)
- Gain one dot of Presence or Oblivion
- Lose one dot of Humanity
- Gain the Bond Resistance Merit (•••)
- Gain three 2-dot Mawla groups (••••••) (your neonate childer)
- Gain the Living In the Past or Infamy Flaw (•)
- Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Leadership or Charisma + Academics. Appeal to your childer's devotion to you or to the twisted faith you've instilled in them to donate their vitae for your Hunger. Increase the Difficulty by your Bane Severity if you're Hecata - that shit hurts.

Recycler

Your feeding habits are shaped by your rare condition as an organovore. You eat human organs, often sourced from bagged medical waste or from corpses you dissect under cover as a mortician or autopsy technician. These are resources that mortals would fix with environmentally-harmful chemicals or simply discard, so you believe that you are doing the world a service by giving these cast-off pieces of human life a new purpose. The curse of the organovore strikes indiscriminately - at least as far as most Kindred can determine - so almost anyone could develop this predator type.

- Add a specialty: Science (Anatomy) or Subterfuge (Impersonation)
- Gain one dot of Protean or Oblivion
- Spend three dots between Contacts and Mask (•••)
- Gain the Feeding Flaw: Organovore (••)
- Hunting Pools: Resolve + Science or Manipulation + Subterfuge. Push through a forensic examination and devour the bagged organs once you're finally left alone and off-camera or pass yourself off as a tech authorized to dispose of a hospital's medical waste.

Regulator

The blood is everything, but for you, it is emotion most especially. You know how to attune your body and mind to the resonance that you consume from a vessel, regulating your own emotions with the echoes of mortal feeling that you imbibe. Mortals whose blood carries resonance are often in the throes of intense emotion, distracted and easily fed upon without breaking the Masquerade. Regulators have a unique ability to manage the Beast through careful choice of vessels, but your dependence on blood with a resonance - often difficult to locate in the thronging of lesser pulses - makes you susceptible to a hard crash when you no longer have others' emotions to use as a crutch. As a mortal, you might have had a mood disorder or been a counselor, a gut microbiologist, or a naturopath.

• Add a specialty: Insight (Emotions) or Performance (Emoting)
• Gain one dot of Auspex or Blood Sorcery
• Gain the Feeding Merit: Bloodhound (•)
• Gain the Feeding Merit: Reanimated Emotions (••)
• Gain the Substance Use Flaw: Hopeless Addiction (••) (Instead of a drug, you are addicted to resonances; you suffer the penalty when you do not have a resonance)
• Hunting Pools: Wits + Insight or Manipulation + Performance. Pick out the one person in a crowd too deep in their feelings to resist or incite strong emotions in an audience with your performance and pluck the most affected for a backstage tasting.

Remote Feeder

The advent of the internet opened up the keyboard and camera as new feeding mechanisms for tech-savvy Kindred. You prefer to feed using the world wide web: you are a streamer with followers eager to get within fangs-reach of you, or you hack into blood bank networks, diverting shipments to refrigerated dead-drops and pilfering from trucks parked for the night. This feeding style potentially allows you to funnel blood from anywhere in the world to your physical location - something you use to decrease your chance of detection. In life, you might have been a content creator, an IT specialist, or a gamer.

• Add a specialty: Finance (Monetization) or Technology (Hacking)
• Gain one dot of Presence or Celerity
• Gain the Feeding Merit: Iron Gullet (•••) or three dots of Haven (•••)
• Gain two dots of Herd (••)
• Gain four dots of Adversary (••••) (the Camarilla Sheriff, or other Kindred, have made it their business to stop you from using technology to feed)
• Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Finance or Intelligence + Technology. Fulfill your Patreon obligations to spend time with (and feed on) your high-tier patrons or divert shipments of fractionated plasma to a refrigerated dead drop of your choice.

Sipper

You have perfected the art of taking the tiniest of sips from a mortal, feeding a mere lick at a time. By spending an entire Scene, or longer, feeding on a crowd in this way, you spread out the impact of your appetites to minimize harm – and notice – by any individual. This habit has the unfortunate side effect of making you unable to feed in larger volumes; your Beast is adapted to grazing, rather than glutting (although it may still unwisely overeat from time to time). In life, you might have been a health food nut, a nutritionist, or a snack hound.

• Add a specialty: Stealth (Feeding) or Athletics (Dodge)
• Gain one dot of Celerity or Dominate
• Gain the Light Stomach Feeding Flaw (••)
• Gain two dots of Contacts (••)
• Gain one dot of Allies (•)
• Hunting Pools: Wits + Stealth or Dexterity + Athletics. Find somewhere crowded and start nibbling – you must either hide your many bites from view as accidental contact or amorous club activity or successfully dodge the elbows and feet flying your way from affronted victims as you blend back in with the crowd.

Skimmer

You acquire blood through a business that you own or that employs you; a blood donation center or an alternative medicine clinic offering bloodletting to gullible mortals. The business itself does legitimate work, but you skim blood off the top for your own uses. Maybe you sneak a little sip from each bloodletter, or perhaps you doctor records to conceal missing bags of whole blood. You probably worked in the healthcare industry in life, whether on the conventional or alternative side.

• Add a specialty: Stealth (Feeding) or Athletics (Dodge)
• Gain one dot of Celerity or Dominate
• Gain the Light Stomach Feeding Flaw(••)
• Gain two dots of Contacts (••)
• Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Larceny or Resolve + Finance. Forge signatures and fake paperwork to mask your consumption of blood or do the nitty gritty work of running a business model that grants you legal access to the blood of your patients.

Specimen

The Second Inquisition, Pentex, or another shady mortal institution has pinned you down as one of their research subjects like a butterfly in a box. They grant you more freedom than the butterfly, but you're probably not convinced they don't plan to stake you to a table someday. Your research "partners" provide you with blood and money in exchange for your willing participation in their experiments. It's possible that you entered into this relationship willingly - perhaps your sponsors even have your best interests at heart, or caused your Embrace during a previous experiment - but it's also possible that you were blackmailed into the relationship. Either way, you walk a delicate balance between keeping your blood suppliers happy and concealing the massive breach of the Masquerade you perpetuate each night. In life, you might have been a scientist, a psychologist, a nurse, or a college student.

- Add one specialty: Science (Biology) or Subterfuge (Masquerade)
- Gain one dot of Blood Sorcery or Protean
- Gain three dots of Herd (•••)
- Gain two dots of Resources (••)
- Gain the Dark Secret: Masquerade Breacher Flaw (••)
- Gain the Known Blankbody Flaw (••)
- Hunting Pools: Intelligence + Science or Wits + Subterfuge. Aid or participate in your sponsor's research or feed them false information to get your fix.

Spider

You prefer to feed by drawing mortals into your web... and perhaps only sometimes allowing them to leave. You own a hotel, a theatre, a club, a brothel, a bar, or any of a hundred other types of establishment designed to entice patrons to linger within. Some Spiders toy with their meals before dining, cultivating an exquisite experience for their final moments, while others maintain a façade of severe authority over their domain designed to instill a subtle unease among their guests. In life, you might have been a hotelier, a bartender, a stage manager, or a Madame.

- Add a specialty: Etiquette (Hospitality) or Intimidation (Authority)
- Gain one dot of Dominate or Protean
- Gain two dots of Haven or Resources (••)
- Gain one dot of Enemies (•)
- Hunting Pools: Charisma + Etiquette or Resolve + Intimidation. Draw victims into your web with your impeccable manners and charm - or just scare them stiff.

Stalker

A vampire is either predator or a parasite, and you most definitely prefer to be a predator. You hunt your victims, human or not, stalking them through midnight streets or moonlit glades until the perfect moment to strike arrives. You savor the pursuit, drawing it out until the Beast demands that you wait no longer. As a mortal, you might have been a big-game hunter, an investigative journalist, or a detective.

- Add a specialty: Craft (Traps) or Survival (Tracking)
- Gain one dot of Animalism or Obfuscate
- Gain one dot of Contacts (•)
- Hunting Pools: Intelligence + Craft or Wits + Survival. Set a trap to catch your prey or track them by spoor, prints, and scent.

Tampon Sucker

There are millions of mortals in the world that spend over 10% of their lives bleeding freely. To your mind, this is a sadly untapped resource – one you have adapted to use. You rifle through the trash of public bathrooms to find used menstrual products from which you can suck dregs of blood like syrup from a lollipop. As distasteful as some might consider your diet, you can find sources of food with ease and impunity; bathrooms are mostly free of cameras and usually remain deserted in the deep night you haunt. In life, you might have been homeless, a freegan, or a radical feminist.

- Add a specialty: Awareness (Blood) or Survival (Urban)
- Gain one dot of Obfuscate or Protean
- Gain the Iron Gullet Merit (•••) or three dots of Herd (•••)
- Gain the Shunned Flaw (••) There are those Kindred who respond with a visceral disgust to your menstrual diet.
- Hunting Pools: Wits + Awareness or Dexterity + Survival. Smell nearby menstruation or the telltale perfume of a lavatory with a tampon disposal bucket, or navigate to the closest such buffet with nothing but your knowledge of urban planning and a bit of deft window climbing.

Therapist

You feed on those with mental illnesses, particularly suicidality. Maybe you genuinely think that a sweet, painless death is the best gift you can give to these people, maybe you get a sick joy from exploiting their pain, or maybe you just like feeling completely sated. Some Therapists choose not to kill their victims, instead using their Kiss to give them a moment of bliss while they use their words to encourage them to get them through the next week - and to the Therapist's next meal. If you do kill your victims, you take pains to make their deaths look like true suicides, and if you're actually kindhearted you could even carry out their last wishes like some sanguine angel of death. In life, you might have experienced suicidality yourself or worked as a mental health professional.

- Add a specialty: Insight (Suicidality) or Academics (Psychology)
- Gain one dot of Auspex or Dominate
- Spend two dots among Contacts, Herd, and Resources (••)
- Gain the Mythic Flaw: Folkloric Block (Uninvited Entry) (•) Becoming so attuned to your victims has caused your blood to adhere to their wishes, even when those wishes are for you to go away.
- Hunting Pools: Manipulation + Insight or Charisma + Academics. Play the role of sympathetic ear to a troubled victim and finish the vent-sesh with a soothing snack or arrange an impromptu meeting with one of your more vulnerable clients.

Warden

You feed on those most powerless to resist you: prisoners of the law, infirmity, or their own minds. You've cultivated a flawless cover as a police officer, prison warden, or nurse that allows you to feed on a captive population with impunity. You might have held this position in life, or you might have been an inmate yourself, taking the advantage your undeath affords you to get revenge on old enemies.

- Add a specialty: Melee (Mortals) or Politics (Regulations)
- Gain one dot of Potence or Obfuscate
- Gain one dot of Contacts or Influence (•)
- Gain two dots of Enemies (••) (former inmates on whom you once fed, or their relatives)
- Hunting Pools: Strength + Melee or Manipulation + Politics. Feed under the guise of beating down the most likely prisoner or twist institutional politics to look the other way as you enter and exit your meal's room.

Xenophile

Changelings, werewolves, mages… these are all dangerous and evasive prey for vampires of all but the greatest age and most potent vitae. And yet, you have developed a taste for their halcyon blood. When you can, you feed on the blood of other supernatural creatures in any way that presents itself, earning yourself both allies and enemies. In life, you might have been one of the lupine kinfolk, a minor mage, friend to a changeling, or a fantasy nerd.

- Add a specialty: Occult (Lupines) or (Changelings) or (Mages), or Insight (True Nature)
- Gain one dot of Foritude or Protean
- Gain a four dot Ally (••••) (a supernatural you help who doesn't mind if you feed on their enemies)
- Gain a two dot Adversary (••) (a supernatural who escaped you)
- Gain the Feeding Flaw: Methuselah's Thirst (•)
- Hunting Pools: Intelligence + Occult or Wits + Insight. Hunting supernaturals will always be difficult, but combing through the occult community or staying alert to those around you that might have an unusual nature finds you plenty of likely victims, even if most of your hunts end without bringing down a lupine, mage, or changeling.

New Merits and Flaws

Some of the Predator Types described above reference new Merits and Flaws. Those are presented here for your use. They can be taken at character creation like any other Merits and Flaws, but the Predator Type in which they are first mentioned is where they feature most prominently.

Reanimated Emotions (Merit)

You are especially attuned to the resonance in your vitae. Your Frenzy checks are altered depending on your current resonance:

- Choleric. You gain a 2-dice bonus to Hunger Frenzy checks, but suffer a 1-die penalty to Fury Frenzy checks.
- Melancholic. You gain a 2-dice bonus to Fury Frenzy checks, but suffer a 1-die penalty to Terror Frenzy checks.
- Phlegmatic. You gain a 1-die bonus to all Frenzy checks, but suffer a 1-die penalty to Social tests that do not use Composure.
- Sanguine. You gain a 2-dice bonus to Terror Frenzy checks, but suffer a 1-die penalty to Hunger Frenzy checks.

Dependent (Flaw)

You rely on a single mortal for all your blood. If you feed on any mortal other than your chosen blood doll, you take a Stain. If your blood doll dies from something other than your Embrace, you take two additional Stains. While you do not have a blood doll, you do not take stains for feeding from other mortals.

Intermittent Fasting (Flaw)

You strive to feed no more than once per night so as to limit the burden you impose on the world. If you feed more than once on a given night, you take a Stain.

Light Stomach (Flaw)

Your undead body has become accustomed to the lightest of meals and cannot abide gluttonous slurping. If you slake more than one Hunger per scene, your body vomits it up, causing you to make Rouse Checks equal to the amount of Hunger you slaked in the scene. You can spend a point of Willpower to delay this violent expulsion by one turn per Willpower, but it is ultimately inevitable.
